SECTION A

QUALIFICATIONS

A. Qualifications

- 1) I, Guy A. Davis, am a Managing Director in the Restructuring and Litigation Services practice (“RLS”) of Protiviti Inc., an international risk-management consulting firm with more than 70 offices in over 20 countries and over 3,700 employees. I was a co-founder of PENTA Advisory Services, LLC (“PENTA”), the predecessor entity to Protiviti’s RLS practice, and currently lead Protiviti’s Richmond, Virginia office.
- 2) Over the past 28 years, I have performed a variety of forensic accounting and financial consulting services in bankruptcies, distressed environments, and other contexts. A more complete description of my background and qualifications is included in my expert report submitted in this case on August 31, 2017. My resume and testimony experience is included in Exhibit 9 of this report.

SECTION B

ASSIGNMENT

B. Assignment

- 3) Counsel for the Class Plaintiffs¹ have engaged Protiviti to provide financial advisory and litigation support services under my direction in connection with the above-captioned litigation. On August 31, 2017, I submitted an expert report in which I opined on matters related to Zuffa's sources and uses of capital and the value conveyed to Zuffa's fighters and its shareholders from 2005 to 2016 and during the Class Period (the "Original Report"). I also opined that:

"From 2005 to 2016, and at all times during the Class Period, Zuffa had the financial wherewithal to pay its fighters substantially more than the amounts it actually paid. Zuffa's exceptional revenue growth, profit margins, and borrowing capacity afforded management and equity holders the ability to forgo a portion of their discretionary distributions, excessive aviation expenses, and management fees to pay fighters a higher compensation. This hypothetical shift to increased fighter compensation would have had no impact on Zuffa's ability to honor its financial obligations to its non-fighter employees or third-party creditors."

- 4) [REDACTED]

- 5) In response to Ms. Davis's report, counsel for the Class Plaintiffs have instructed me to determine: (i) how much more Zuffa could have paid its fighters, assuming alternative but feasible expense and capital structures, and (ii) the effect that paying increased fighter compensation during the Class Period would have on Zuffa's financial condition and shareholder returns. I have been asked to assume, for purposes of my analyses, (a) none of the MMA industry growth that would have occurred absent the conduct challenged in this case as contemplated by Dr. Singer would have occurred, and (b) none of the additional fighter compensation would have come from MMA promoters other than Zuffa (where some fighters might have been able to receive higher compensation in the but-for world). The results of my analyses and related expert opinion are contained herein. I incorporate by reference all of the information and defined terms included in my original report dated August 31, 2017.

SUMMARY OF OPINIONS

C. Summary of Opinions

6)

² The Class Period technically spans from December 16, 2010 until the anticompetitive scheme alleged in the Consolidated Class Action Complaint ceases. However, due to data limitations, feasibility analyses are limited to the period ending December 31, 2016. The additional compensation computed in each scenario includes an estimate for 2017 based on 2016's annualized increased compensation amount. See Exhibits 1 through 6.

SECTION D

ANALYSIS AND FINDINGS

D. Analysis and Findings

The Integrated Financial Model

- 7) [REDACTED]
- 8) To specifically quantify that amount, in connection with this report, I followed the following five-step process:
- a. Developed a comprehensive financial model that integrated Zuffa's actual income statement, balance sheet, and statement of cash flow for each year of operation from 2005 to 2016.
 - b. Constructed an amortization schedule for each component of Zuffa's Discretionary Distribution Debt from 2007 to 2016 and integrated the revised principal and interest payments into the financial statement model.
 - c. Used the integrated model to create a full set of pro-forma financial statements that reflect the financial condition of Zuffa from 2005 to 2016, and during the Class Period, that would have existed under various alternative expense and capital structure scenarios.
 - d. Selected a range of higher compensation scenarios that were feasible based on my analysis of pro-forma cash flow, EBITDA, cash balance, working capital, and stockholders' equity.

³ Excluding January Capital.

[REDACTED]

- e. Recast the 2010 (January Capital) and 2016 (WME-IMG) valuation analyses to reflect the assumed higher compensation levels, adjusted the pro-forma cash flows to incorporate the new valuations, and calculated the pro-forma internal rate of return (“IRR”) earned by the OEH under each scenario.⁵

Source of Funds to Increase Fighter Compensation

- 9) [REDACTED]
- 10) To be conservative, additional (or new) borrowings or equity proceeds were not used as a means to increase compensation. While both sources of cash were available, the increased compensation from the three sources referenced above lowered EBITDA, which naturally lowered the firm’s equity value and borrowing capacity. The inclusion of additional debt or equity would require making speculative assumptions regarding loan covenants, collateral positions and expected returns. I elected to simplify the analysis and limit the computation of additional compensation to the amount that could be paid without additional borrowings or equity raises.

Feasibility Analysis

- 11) The scenarios were premised on alternative fighter compensation expressed as a percentage of revenue. This is appropriate because Zuffa’s revenues are, in large part, correlated to the volume and quality of the fights that took place during the year.

⁵ The IRR calculation includes the increased amount received by OEH in August 2017.

All of the scenarios in this report contemplate alternative expense and capital structures of Zuffa that could have been implemented by the OEH and management of Zuffa. None of these alternative structures would have required material concessions or compromise by creditors of Zuffa or other independent third parties. I have made no adjustments to Zuffa's historical revenues or any operating costs, other than fighter compensation, aviation expense and management fees.

⁷ For this analysis, I am using total Zuffa revenue. As I understand it, for most of their analyses, Drs. Singer and Zimbalist used only those revenues derived directly from events.

Impact on Shareholders

- 25) As indicated above, I was instructed to calculate Zuffa's capacity to increase compensation to fighters over the Class Period. Zuffa's capacity to increase fighter compensation was determined based on traditional financial analyses of pro-forma cash flow, liquidity, and profitability. The investment returns earned by the OEH in each scenario were not a factor in determining the feasibility of higher compensation. My analyses only considered the reasonable requirement that Zuffa distribute cash to shareholders of at least the amount that they would need for income tax purposes.
- 26) Independent of the analysis to determine Zuffa's capacity to increase fighter compensation, counsel requested that I evaluate the impact that the higher compensation levels would have on shareholder investment returns.
- 27) [REDACTED]

28) These payments to shareholders comprise the return earned by the OEH over the investment horizon.

29) [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

30) [REDACTED]

¹¹ In general, equity investors receive a weighted return on their portfolio of investments of 32.9%. A component of these weighted returns are the returns on successful companies, which range from 50% to 70% for start-up companies and 40% to 60% for first stage or early development ventures.
